CATHEDRAL SERVICE

Joyous Day Winds Up With Brilliant Ball
at Night.

With an earnestness entirely English, but with a touch of American gaiety, was the celebration in honor of the coronation of King George V and Queen Mary conducted in Honolulu yesterday, and probably in no other city outside the dominion of Great Britain was the occasion made so much of as here, at the Crossroads of the Pacific.

It was no half-way celebration that Honolulu gave herself up to, for although the day was not declared an official holiday, it was practically so. Business houses closed early in the morning, nothing of moment took place on the stock exchanges, government departments were hardly in evidence, even the circuit court was closed for the day, while every loyal Britisher came out into the open and cried "God save the King" in a most unmistakable manner, although not always in public.

And as was most fitting, his Gracious Majesty's representative, Ralph G. E. Forster, consul-general of Great Britain at Honolulu, was the central figure of the occasion. At the cricket match he held a reception, at which he received the congratulations of all guests, while at the Moana, in the evening, he was the proxy of his monarch in receiving the respect and solicitations of all who took part.

All Honor the Day.

It was not alone residents of English birth or citizenship who joined in the special services in honor of their Majesties, the great Cathedral of St. Andrew was crowded with a brilliant assemblage in which the uniforms of the United States army and navy were

REBELS BEATEN IN LAST FIGHT FOR THEIR REPUBLIC

TIA JUANA, Mexico, June 23.—A desperate battle was fought near here yesterday by one hundred rebels under General Mosby, of the Socialist army, and five hundred Mexican troops, in which the rebels were forced to retreat.

The rebels lost two killed and several wounded, while it is stated that the federales lost twenty killed and more wounded. The fighting lasted for two hours.

The rebels finally marched to the boundary line and laid down their arms, surrendering to a United States officer. They were marched across the line as United States prisoners.

The federal troops have occupied Tia Juana. The socialist republic of Lower California, of which Dick Ferris was elected president, is at an end.

Monarchs Are Crowned With Ancient Rites in Abbey.

LONDON, June 23.—Seemingly all of London converged upon Buckingham Palace last evening, following the coronation ceremonies of the day, singing the national anthem. The scene was an impressive one.

In answer to the cheers of the hundreds of thousands gathered there King George appeared on a balcony of the palace with the Prince of Wales and bowed to the people. He was greeted with a prolonged burst of cheering.

Their majesties dined at home, in Buckingham Palace, last evening, and retired early, tired from their long day of ceremony.

Coronation Ceremony.

George the Fifth, eighth of the House of Hanover, was crowned with his consort, Queen Mary, at historic Westminster Abbey, yesterday.

The world paid homage to the King and Queen in the greatest coronation ceremony ever held. The progress of their majesties from Buckingham Palace to Westminster Abbey was one great picturesquely procession.

From the time the procession left the palace until the abbey was reached there was an unbroken ovation. The route was hedged with a vast polyglot host, every nation contributing its representatives, and the tumult was thunderous. The welcome given the King and Queen was literally deafening.

Preceded by the yeomen of the guard, the Queen rode in the state carriage. She wore a wonderful coronation robe of royal purple with a train embroidered in gold. The train was borne by six daughters of earls. She also carried a great bouquet of pink carnations, the gift of the Gardeners' Association of England, an ancient guild.

King George was next in the procession, walking behind the state carriage. He was dressed in the crimson robe of state, with the train borne by eight noblemen, and wore the collar and garter and cap of state.

Arrive at Abbey.

When the royal procession arrived at Westminster Abbey, the King and Queen proceeded to the throne, where they knelt briefly.

The famous abbey was thronged with the highest dignitaries of the church and notables of the world. The ceremony followed the ancient rites.

Presented to Subjects.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presented the King to his subjects as their sovereign, and he was greeted with mighty acclamations. The Litany was then read and communion recited.

The King kissed the Bible and took the oath to govern his dominions according to the laws of the land and to maintain the Protestant religion.

King Anointed.

Then followed the solemn ceremony of anointing, after which the King was invested in the royal robe and given the ring and sceptre. He ascended to the throne and was given homage by the prince and people.

After the recessional, the procession reformed and turned toward Buckingham Palace, with the multitude filling the air with cheers.

Private Receptions.

Last evening was given up to fastidious and private receptions. J. Pierpont Morgan entertained in the most lavish manner one hundred and fifty guests. Special Ambassador John Davis Hammont was the guest at a private residence.

Among the best dressed women at the coronation ceremonies were those of American birth, including the Duchess of Roxburghe, Countess Granville, Lady Essex, formerly May Queen; Beatrice Mills and Adele Grant.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—At its convention here yesterday, the National Sunday School Association unanimously elected William A. Hartshorn of Boston, Massachusetts, its president for the ensuing year.

SCOTTISH CEDAR TOTAL.

EDINBURGH, June 23.—Scotland has a population of 4,760,000, according to the provisional figures of the census made public today. This is an increase over the last census of Scotland, and is the smallest increase in 187 years since 1851.

IN SPECIAL FLIGHT FOR ARMY, MASSON LOSES

In the presence of several hundred officers and men at Leilehua yesterday morning, Aviator Masson took a trip with his Bleriot monoplane which nearly resulted seriously for him.

From a height of only a little less than one hundred feet the machine took a downward dive, which no effort of the aviator could stop, and landing on the ground turned a complete somersault, Masson being under the plane when it stopped finally.

That he was not killed outright was considered fortunate and his escape was a most miraculous one.

When the machine fell a number of soldiers started for it on the run and when they arrived they picked up the pilot through the aid of Masson to start out, he having been injured but slightly in the fall.

Just what caused the machine to do the trick it is not known, as Masson could not be reached for an interview, but Aviator Weller, who witnessed the accident, expressed the opinion that the machine which exploded on the wings during the climb might possibly had a lot to do with it.

In the big run and then after being repaired were what caused the bird to fly into the trees when he was about to land near to the way it did.

Masson was slightly injured but he got out and took the reports on the way he was flying.
